PROFESSIONAL PROFILE

Dmytri Kleiner is Chief Experience Officer at Saleor Commerce, an open-source commerce platform used by major brands including Lush, Breitling, Discogs, and Cost Plus Drugs, handling over one billion requests per month. With more than 20 years of experience from senior positions at Red Hat, Contentful, ThoughtWorks, Automattic, and SoundCloud, he brings deep expertise in commerce architecture, developer experience, and open-source business models.

Under his leadership, Saleor became the first open-source platform to support OpenAI's Agentic Commerce Protocol, enabling instant checkout in ChatGPT. Kleiner is a leading voice on AI commerce integration, platform gatekeeping, and merchant autonomy.

AREAS OF EXPERTISE

- Agentic Commerce & AI Integration: ChatGPT checkout, conversational commerce, platform gatekeeping, privacy implications

- Commerce-as-Code: Developer-first e-commerce architecture, headless commerce, API-first platforms, billion-request scale
 - Developer Experience: Building tools developers love, API design, developer communities, GraphQL
 - Open-Source Business Models: Commercialization strategies, merchant autonomy, avoiding lock-in
 - Platform Economics & Gatekeeping: Centralization risks, merchant disintermediation, payment provider limitations
 - Tech Leadership: Customer experience, product strategy, scaling organizations for major brands

TESTIMONIALS

David Jenkins (Contentful): "Dmytri is one of my favourite people at Contentful. I worked with a large bank, who asked for Dmytri by name. Whenever Dmytri is in a room with customers or prospects, they are in awe. I believe Dmytri has been instrumental in the success of working with several of our largest clients."

Alan Robertson (Linux-HA): "Dmytri had some absolutely great and highly innovative ideas. When we implemented his ideas, the results worked far beyond our expectations."
